1. The prior art made of record and not relied upon is considered pertinent to applicant's disclosure. The Etherington patent (6,231,743) is directed to a method of electroplating a metal onto a substrate such as a semiconductor device. The method includes measuring a first current flow in a first position apart from a cathode, an anode and the substrate; and plating onto the substrate. The Henri et al patent (6,440,291) is directed to a method for electrochemical processing such as deposition onto a semiconductor wafer. An entry voltage is applied to the substrate prior to immersion into the electrolyte, the substrate is immersed, determining that the voltage has passed a trigger voltage, waiting for a defined period of time, and then initiating electrochemical processing. The Lowe patent (6,495,018) is directed to electroplating method and apparatus. In performing the method a stream of electrolyte is directed to a target regions and the amount of reduction of ions in the region is controlled; the current flowing to the region is measured and controlled in dependence on an output of the measurement while the electrolyte is swirled.

REASONS FOR ALLOWANCE

2. The following is an examiner's statement of reasons for allowance:
3. The prior art of record shows that the measurement and control of current and voltage in an electroplating process is known. However, the prior art does not teach or suggest a method for electroplating a metal from an electroplating solution onto a conductive surface in which an electrical current is passed through the surface and adjacent solution, determining an electroplating voltage based on the current through the surface and adjacent solution, and maintaining the voltage while electroplating metal onto the surface. Nor does not prior art teach or suggest an electroplating system including means for performing the recited process steps; or an electroplating system with a plating controller capable of carrying out the functions required by the process.

4. Any comments considered necessary by applicant must be submitted no later than the payment of the issue fee and, to avoid processing delays, should preferably accompany the issue fee. Such submissions should be clearly labeled "Comments on Statement of Reasons for Allowance."

Any inquiry concerning this communication or earlier communications from the examiner should be directed to William T. Leader whose telephone number is 571-272-1245. The examiner can normally be reached on Mondays-Thursdays and alternate Fridays, 7:30-4:00.
